ZANE ANDERSON –FLYING HEART BREWING & PUB

June 30, 2024, West Monroe

There was a big crowd at Flying Heart when artist Zane Anderson took the stage. With acoustic guitar in hand, Zane welcomed the audience and opened with Creedence Clearwater Revival's "Bad Moon Rising." With all eyes on the tropics, this song was highly appropriate. He followed up with "Folsom Prison Blues" by Johnny Cash. The audience responded with cheers and accolades and danced as he played songs like "Feel Like Jesse James," "Drinking Problem," "One Headlight," and "Margaritaville." It was a picturesque scene with a cool evening thundershower, the scent of wet earth, and the audience in a festive mood.

Zane's richly textured voice filled the venue. It was a nice evening of music with Zane taking some song requests. There was a poignant moment when Clara McBroom joined him on stage. The chemistry between these two was undeniable. The song they chose to sing together was "A Life Where We Worked Out." The people at my table got very quiet while they were singing together. The photo I took of them almost captures the moment. You needed to be there. It was a memorable night in downtown West Monroe, LA.

Book Zane Anderson if you need live music for a party or event. Your special occasion is guaranteed success.

Thank you, Jay Waalk, for your continued commitment to local artists and the community. It was good to see Betty Ingram Smith and my other friends this evening.

Note: The Sunday Beer Garden Concert Series at Flying Heart is a popular event that takes place in Downtown West Monroe each Sunday evening. It offers a platform for talented artist like Zane Anderson to showcase their music in a unique and engaging setting.
